Best practices

Student Participatory approach:

Navjeevan Law College firmly believes that besides regular classroom academic lectures, it is indispensable to cultivate sense of team work and harmonious environment amongst the student's community. Further envisages that law being a discipline of social sciences, students must be encouraged to assume and embark upon various participatory rolls so as to make them confident and self sufficient after their completion of studies in the college so as to be successful in their professional life. Pursuant to this belief various committees have been constituted and students are encouraged to volunteer to be active associates in the respective committees being guide by the faculty in charge. At every pace of their performance to boost up their spirit and encourage, a college always supported and cheered their involvement in successful accomplishment of their respective task of the committee. The committee includes the admission committee where the students help the new comers for proper documentation of the certificates, filling of the information in the admission form etc. In College Development Committee students representative are always appointed. They are also been invited for the meetings and their views are given due importance to take in to consideration the graveness of the students. In Anti-Ragging Committee also one male and one female students representative is nominated. The Internal Complaint Committee established as per Vishakha guidelines plays very vital role in the college administration. It includes three students' representatives. The students having their complaints can refer them to the committee members, who can discuss it in the regular meetings of the committee. The presiding officer and the faculty members then raise the issue in the CDC meetings. The Screening committee formed as per UGC guideline with a student representation. Library Advisory Committee, IQAC Committee, NAAC Committee are some of the important committees where the students are made integral part of the administration of the college. The students can suggest the books required in the library committee meeting. They can have their actual participation and voice in NAAC Committee also. The suggestion box is also maintained in front of office. The college considers these suggestions valuable and placed good suggestions before the meeting of CDC for discussion and implementation. Nav-Justice is the annual magazine of Navjeevan Law College. The students articles are published in the magazine. This power of expression gives them an inner independency, which will help them in the future profession.

2. Legal aid and legal awareness:

The work of legal aid clinic has now become a full fledged activity. Under the guidance of Mr. J. C. Shirsale the students are getting a practical experience to know the problems and the legal solution for their legal dispute. This practical experience will enrich the students with the legalities, technicalities and social conditions of the litigants which will help them while entering in to the legal profession. The students are entrusted with the topics and to prepare them for the legal awareness camps. After finalizing it from the concerned experts and teacher the students are permitted to present it before the villagers. The students used to make the awareness by street play regarding the various legal problems. The legal awareness amongst the poor and needy persons helps the students to learn the law, to present the law which ultimately develops in to them the search, research of law and the stage daring also.
